'I just wanted to say a HUGE thank you for today. The course was so informative, moving, thought-provoking and, for me, will be life changing. A lot of things I already knew have today converged with many other factors - the amazing people that were there, the time we are at all made for a powerful day for me personally.' - Attendee at a Carbon Literacy course run by Marches Energy Agency

Carbon Literacy for Interested Organisations will equip you and your organisation to bring about the rapid reduction in carbon emissions required by the climate emergency. This course is suitable for all sectors and, in addition to covering everything you need to become Carbon Literate, will also look at how to begin creating your own course. It's also a chance to meet others who are involved in creating Carbon Literacy courses.

Carbon Literacy is defined as "An awareness of the carbon dioxide costs and impacts of everyday activities, and the ability and motivation to reduce emissions, on an individual, community and organisational basis."

The Carbon Literacy Project offers a day's worth of accredited learning, covering:

- Climate change science
- Carbon footprints
- Social equity in relation to climate change
- What you can do to act - as an individual and at community level
- Strategies and skills for communicating action on climate change
- A chance to reflect on the impact climate change is and will have
- Beginning to write your own Carbon Literacy Course
- How the course can be adapted for your organisation and structure
